

If We Recycle

A lot of people in Africa and South America are relying on waste for a living. They make instruments out of trash. Tá alán daoine san Afraic agus Meiriceá Theas ag breath ar bruscar le haghaidh saol. Déanann siad uirlaisí ceoil as an mbruscar seo.

Seo an bealach a fhéachann na huirlisí ceoil.

When you give recyclable stuff to the Landfill.

- When you give recyclable stuff to the landfill they either leave it there or bundle it down to tiny pieces and still just leave it there.
- Nuair a thógann tú rudaí athúsáideach don landfill fágann siad é ansin nó déanann siad píosa beaga astu agus fós fágann siad é ansin.

This is what a landfill looks like.

HOW THEY MAKE THE INSTRUMENTS!

- They go out and get rubbish from the landfill.
- They twist the rubbish until it looks like some sort of instrument, then they string it, tune it and sell it.
- Téann siad amach chun brúscar a fháil ón landfill. Casann siad é go dtí go féachann siad mar úrlais ceol. Ansin sreang siad é, tiúin siad é agus ansin díolann siad é.

Seo iad ag déanamh na úirlisí.

The amount we waste

- As of 2011 we waste 1.3 billion tons of food, about one third of the global food production are lost or was. In developed countries much food, waste about 100 kilograms (220 lb) per person a year is wasted at the consumption stage. If we recycle more there wouldn't be as much waste in Paraguay and they might be able to afford alot more things like school, a house and a proper job.
